(Refer V2 & 17) - 1Co 11:5 [illegible]

There have been three major explanations. He may have meant that her head lacked some type of external cover,

Such as a shawl

Second, may be short hair

Third, may have meant that she had let her hair down rather than leaving it piled up on her head. It was customary for women to wear their hair up when they went out in public.

1Co 11:6 [illegible];
[illegible].

A woman who shaved her head in Greco-Roman culture did so to appear as a man. To blur the relationship between men and women, particularly the sexual distinctions. Such culture starts at child level nowadays – treat boy as boy & girl as girl. Hair cut in short indicates - she wanted to take the place of a man.

@ Rome "The prostitutes keep their hair short, and they do not wear a head-covering in public. Their hairstyle and manner announced to others just what they were and what they were offering……. "In Jewish law, a woman proved guilty of adultery had
